

BRIGADIER GENERAL GREGORY L. KENNEDY

Commander, 184th Sustainment Command

Brigadier General Gregory L. Kennedy was appointed Commander, 184th Sustainment Command on May 20, 2015. In this position, he oversees all of the 184th Sustainment Command's internal and external support missions in support of United States Forces, Multinational Forces and Interagency organizations worldwide. General Kennedy supervises supply, maintenance and field service units and directs the synchronization of transportation, medical, personnel, finance, and engineer unit activities involved with mission support. He provides technical advice and planning assistance to the Theater Sustainment Command commander on all external support activities. He plans, prepares, rapidly deploys and executes sustainment operational logistics within the assigned area of responsibility and ensures that effective command and control is provided for continuous, anticipatory and responsive sustainment operations for all assigned and attached units.

General Kennedy was commissioned as a Second Lieutenant, Infantry, on December 17, 1982 through the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at the University of Mississippi where he was recognized as a Distinguished Military Graduate. He has served in command and staff positions at every level, including Commander, 1st Battalion, 185th Aviation Regiment, Commander, 185th Aviation Brigade, Deputy Chief of Staff, State Aviation Officer, Joint Force Headquarters, Mississippi Army National Guard, and Commander, 66th Troop Command. General Kennedy served on active duty as Brigade S3 Liaison Officer, 155th Armored Brigade Combat Team during combat operations in Operation Iraqi Freedom in 2009.
